Gute's Hill.

From The Press:
Mrs. Ertson—I consider it a personal grievance when I cannot see the sun rise. No morning ever breaks so clouded that the solar orb cannot be seen, but I regard it as a misfortune. Dun and gray the eastern sky spread itself before me this morning, and gave no hint of the shining behind it. The wind, too, was from the north-east and seemed to forebode snow. Now and then a flake, like a piece of down, floated lazily to the earth and disappeared at the moment of contact.

A great cat walked daintily down toward Norcross's barn and crouched by a stone, watching for field mice. At four o'clock in the afternoon she sat there still, as quiet as silence and relentless as fate.

At precisely half past ten a. m. the sun worked its way through the clouds, and shot a ray into my window. It touched me into joy, and thenceforward the day was a delight.

Only a little way from my window stands a trumpet vine leaning wearily against a stake, and extending its ungainly arms in every direction. In the summer time the humming birds in the whirrmist of their flimsy and flying wings, poised themselves at the throats of the floral trumpets, and listened to music we cannot hear.

Cutting down trees? Well, the man who cuts down a shade tree is a public enemy! It is high time that the city of Owosso should understand that its "highway commissioner" is rendering himself and his "sidewalk committee" liable for the murder of living trees! There is no law that permits a "committee" or a "commissioner" to cut down trees bordering on the streets of our city in the summary fashion they have been doing, and no man is fit for any position under our "city government" who will do it! It is just as necessary to take certain "parliamentary proceedings" to remove "shade trees" as it is to condemn land! I have looked on in perfect wonder at the stolidity of the public, who have permitted this inexcusable vandalism on the part of some of its petty officers!

Not long ago I understand that a petition was extensively signed begging the authorities to spare a certain wood-monarch that encroached somewhat on a sidewalk! Instead of that, both the man who would cut it and the man who would authorize the cutting should have been arrested and dealt with according to law! Understand that bills will be presented for the value of all the trees thus destroyed.

The man who assassinates a tree is legally liable for it and ought to be prosecuted criminally!

I give this advice gratis, viz: That no city authority can cut one down without precedent action of a character not yet taken in this city!

A tree has been growing these many years under your eye. You have seen the bird's nest in its loving arms, and heard the winds whisper among its leaves. It has sheltered you and your children, and at last some day some lubber glances along the line on which it stands, and proceeds to slay it without even a request to you to remove it! Do you think he can do it?

A few nights ago some miscreant who hated a neighbor, entered his barn at night and cut his horse's throat! The innocent animal possibly neighed to him in the darkness. The fiend probably patted the poor creature's neck to make him feel that a friend had come, and then slew him! How much better is one who takes the life of a harmless tree without the leave of its owner.

Let the people see that no tree-killer holds office under the next administration!

All unbelief is practical atheism. The man who does not think about God is as though he believed in his non-existence. That is what is meant by the saying, "he hath said in his heart" that there is no deity.

It is not alone the man who declares that God is dead, as in Jean Richter's dream, who is an atheist; but every soul who does not stand in awe of the Sovereign Head and beat his breast and call to Him!

There is many a fool who says "There is no God" whose name is on the church books!

Constipation is the cause of all sorts of serious disorders of the blood. Strong cathartics are worse than useless. Burdock Blood Bitters is nature's own remedy for all troubles of this sort.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 15.—A teacher in the Michigan City school wants to adopt the baby of Mrs. Thompson, which was buried for three days and then found alive by Detective McRae.
